

Behavioral and Skill Support Tools

Business Challenge

Everything begins and ends with Leadership... people leave people not companies. Without effective leadership, organizations may never realize their greatest potential, profitability and competitive advantage. To develop leaders, organizations must help them get clear insight into their behavior and skills – what's working and what's not from different perspectives - helping them understand themselves and the relationships between how they behave, think and act. Once this awareness is achieved, leadership development can proceed. Without it, change rarely happens.

We provide four assessments for our clients: One is based on the concepts discussed in Monday Morning Leadership by David Cottrell, another is based on Ken Carnes' book Management Insights. Our LeadView Profile aligns with leadership competencies adaptable to your leadership development program. Our PeerView Profile focuses on peer assessment for high potentials. Assessments are administered online and include gap analysis, comments and development planning reports. Sample reports are available for your review.

Behavioral Assessment Tools

The two biggest challenges facing companies are hiring the right people and developing future leaders. We utilize the Harrison Behavioral Assessment that examines a person's traits and behaviors and compares them to an established norm of behavior and traits considered essential for success in a variety of functional positions like sales, management, marketing and customer service. The Harrison Assessment is an essential hiring tool that can very accurately predict if potential new hires and High Potential candidates have the traits you're looking for. It's also an excellent first step in guiding the content of your management/leadership development and Executive Coaching programs.

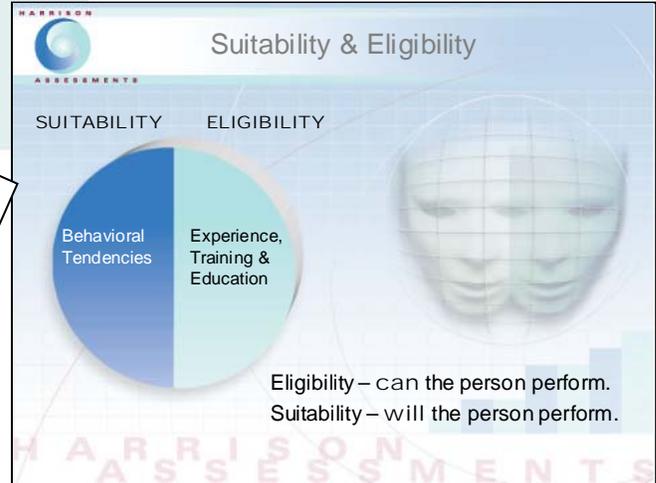

Behavioral Competencies

Employees who enjoy most aspects of their work tend to perform more effectively. The more an employee tends to dislike aspects of his/her work, the lesser the performance.

Suitability and Eligibility

If we are able to determine the degree to which a person will enjoy the various aspects of a job, we will have a strong indication of the probability of success in the job, assuming the person has the education and experience necessary for the position.
